

At Moredun we work to help keep farm animals happy and healthy

Our scientists and vets study diseases that make farm animals sick. This helps us all understand what can be done to stop animals getting poorly.

Disease Control

How to deal with outbreaks of different bugs in animals

Diagnostics

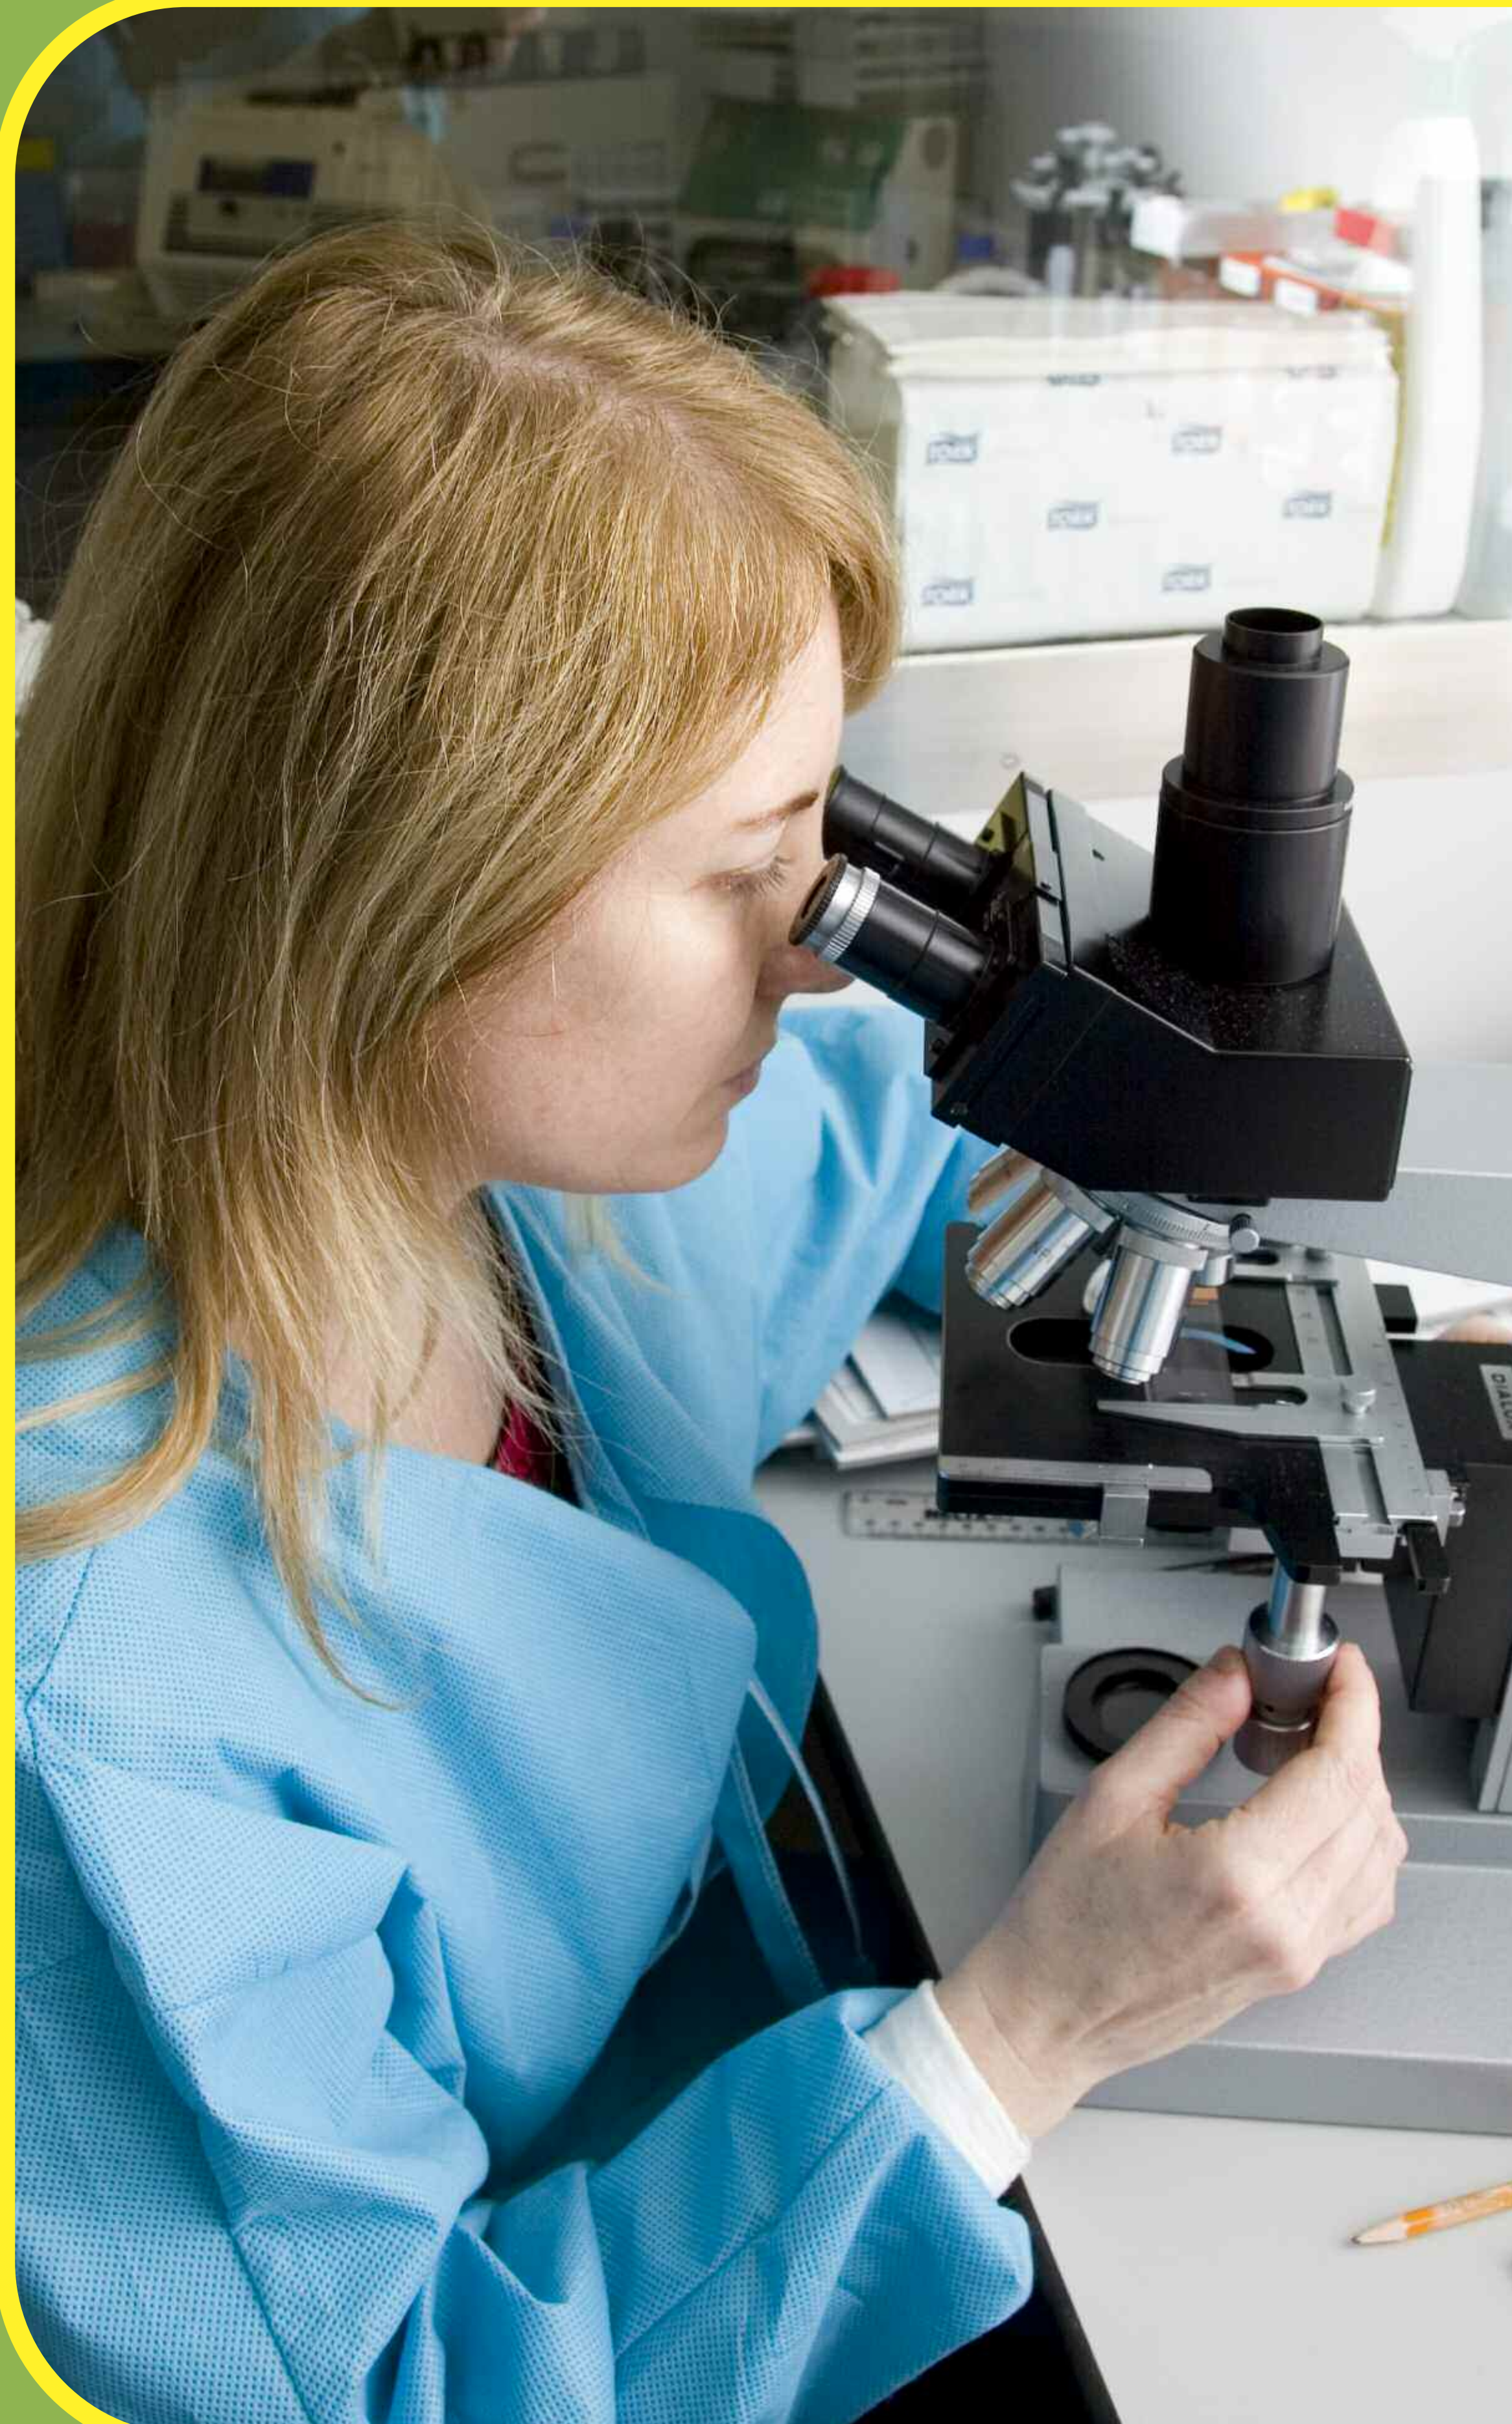

How to find out what bugs an animal has and what is making it poorly

Vaccines

Development of special jags that protect animals from becoming poorly

As well as sheep and cattle, Moredun also works on diseases that can affect wildlife and people too.

By talking to people about our work, what we discover and the tests we develop, we can support the farming industry and help in the fight against disease.
